I attended the surgery for a new patient assessment. I received no information beforehand about what this would involve. A blood test was requested on the day for liver function, kidney function, B12, and folate. I was allowed to say no to this, but I had no time to consider this before the appointment. The person was friendly and not pushy, but I was constantly interrupted when I spoke. Later when I checked the system, one entry appeared incorrect and another answered a question I was never asked. Overall, it was ok, but I feel uneasy about future treatment and communication with the surgery.

Every time you visit this practice you never see a professional doctor only a trainee who then either refers you or you have to make another appointment to see a professional doctor which will now extend my waiting time to 10 weeks of agony. Making a appointment in the surgery is embarrassing having to try and make a case that you need a doctor then for the receptionist to repeat your medical condition back to you at the top of their voice making sure everyone hears them Woodland Drive is a shambles of it's former self

I went for a double appointment yesterday and I saw a lovely nurse who's one of the nurse practitioners. The nurse apologised for running abit late, but that didn't bother me as I still was able to have the allocated double appt as I had a few things to discuss. One of the nurse practitioners checked me out very thoroughly and was very understanding and empathic. I've been with this practice for approx 5 years and I can honestly say that it's much improved especially over the last 2 years. All the gps, nurses, receptionists are helpful, understanding and listen. Most of the time, (if you ring up early enough) you can get an appointment. Woodland Drive Surgery is a modern, fresh, roomy and well organised practice and to be honest, it isn't very often the GP, or nurses are running behind time and nobody is perfect, sometimes these things can't be helped. What I also like about this GPs is that it is local and it has a handy pharmacy next door to the practice. The staff and pharmacist are all lovely too. 😊

All of the staff I have met so far have been lovely and helpful. Although I have only been registered within 24-48 hours, the gentleman on the desk had my prescription sorted for the next day. Prompt response to my query online, reply was a link to book an appointment, which I did, app was for just under two weeks time, but for something non-urgent that was not too bad. Appointment however was a little disappointing. Don't think my records were read before I went in as I was asked 'how can I help', but they had asked me to go in! We discussed my online query, don't feel 100% reassured by response, I also mentioned an ongoing problem which has been worsening since last year, no examination, problem seemed to be put down to hearing aids, though I said I hadn't worn them for over 3 months and the problem was still worsening, and was present before I started wearing them, first ear infection November, got hearing aids in December, so to me not a hearing aid problem. So I left the Practice feeling no better off, have booked an appointment with audiology, who if it isn't a hearing aid problem won't be able to do anything but 'maybe' send me to ENT, so, no treatment or advice until hospital appointment. Having just recovered from three ear infections, not sure why my ears weren't even checked, so although it was a very pleasant consultation, not 100% happy with it. Working for the NHS I know that an ENT 'New' appointment will take around 6-12 months to get an appointment, and I'm not sure returning to the GP for help with the symptoms will be of benefit. This is such a shame, if I had left feedback a week ago it would have been 100% glowing as up-until now I really cannot complain about the service both myself and my husband (who has ongoing issues) have received.

I have been a patient at numerous surgeries in the Barnsley area and this is by far the worst with regards to the GP's bedside manner! I have left this surgery more than once crying my eyes out having not been listened to and no care given on how I can manage my issues or any referrals being made to find out what's wrong . The practice unfortunately assumes everyone is tech savey. E.g. sending links to landlines. Also it took an onsite haranguing to get the auto.attendant altered to accommodate such persons who don't have the understanding the automated phone system. Previously no accommodation for those who don't have the necessary items to navigate to try a contact a human. Discovered later this was rectified (by reverting to the original arrangement).

Woodland Drive Medical Centre is the best medical practice I've ever used. They answer the phones reasonably quickly. They are always able to help and point me in the right direction. The staff are kind, compassionate and make me feel listened to. When I recently went to an appointment, I didn't have to wait at all. My practitioner listened to my issues and then ran through all my options. In particular, they praised me for the steps I'd already taken which was a big reassurance that I was doing the right thing for myself.

She was quick to send my prescription to my pharmacy so that I could get my medication. My appointment was 15 minutes behind the arranged time. Other people in the practice were all having this problem. Once I got to see the lead GP I found him; extremely distant and uninterested in what I had to say. He very rarely made eye contact with me, further emphasising his disinterest. I was in and out of the appointment within 3 minutes. Every time I attempted to expand on my issues he'd simply divert and tell me book to see him in 4 weeks. Which you can't even do because they don't do appointments 4 weeks in advance. My next point of call would be A+E, but this disincentivises a proactive approach to one's health when all you get told is 'if it gets any worse, go to A+E.

Very efficient practitioner with a discussion about the menopause. However my bp reading was very high. So she bobbed through to have a word with a doctor who recommended I have blood pressure tablets immediately. The prescription didn't come through as promised. I rang up to ask where it was. 'It's with a doctor, I can't hurry it - sorry' I was told. I rang this morning. Still nothing. Rang at lunchtime to find out they haven't a clue where it is and they'll have to get back to me. I wasn't even stressed before I knew I had bad bp, So no, what started off as a chilled consultation has quickly sunk. And meanwhile I still haven't got these 'urgent tablets' and have to sit and wait until someone bothers to ring back - if they can remember to!

First time with a GP at my new surgery and felt unhappy at my previous one. I have been suffering with bulging discs and extremely painful hip and legs since I had an accident 5 years ago. I was sick of having painkillers thrown at me by the previous Dr's so wanted a new approach. I felt unheard until I walked in to see this GP. I shared with him what research I has done about a do ask Spinal nerve blocker injection and was keen to try. He couldn't refer me directly as the clinic is a private one but he hopes when I'm assessed by pain management they can do the referral as my quality of life is seriously affected. Let's see what this brings

I recently moved to this practice having moved into the area and recently visited for the first time. I saw a nurse, not a gp, but the nurse was fab - really personable and put me at ease throughout my appointment. I do have one piece of feedback, the signage in reception is missing some room numbers. I was called to room 8, but the signage only directed to rooms 1-6 and so I had to ask where I was supposed to go.

I had reason to call for appointments a few times in the last week or so. Whilst I appreciate the Surgery's need to protect itself with "small print", it takes ages to wait through the almost-memorised messages to get to the reason for calling. It would be nice if there was a suitably-worded shortcut to bypass the messages. On the phone system generally, I was pleasantly surprised that the "call at eight tomorrow" requirement for appointments worked quite well, with only a 2-3 minute wait.

I phoned for a GP appointment but was given an Associate Practitioner instead. I find it frustrating that when you phone for an appointment you are not able to see a GP. I asked if there was a GP available and then had to explain the problem and was told the other person could deal with the issue. This may be the case but I feel that if you ask for a GP appointment that is what you should be given. You shouldn't have to prove/ pass a quality assurance test in order to be seen by a fully qualified medical professional.

I made the same day appointment due to having signs of infection in my recent operation wounds. I saw a physician, which was okay. She was lovely and checked my wounds and I did indeed have an infection. She prescribed me antibiotics and said the doctor needed to sign this off and to call back later the same day to pick up from pharmacy next door. Again this was okay as only a few hours to wait. Called back at said time and pharmacy argued you can not get same day prescriptions, even for antibiotics. I called into the surgery to speak with the receptionist. She explained that the doctor had been very busy and hadn't signed off any prescription as yet and would be following day. I am not complaining about the doctor being busy, but if you have physicians in the lighten the load, help out why can they not hand out prescriptions. She's good enough to diagnose a problem but not give treatment.

Having had appointments at this surgery with a nasty doctor in the past that have left me with medical anxiety and lasting distress, it was a relief to speak to somebody that was so kind and compassionate. I feel I actually got what I wanted from my appointment, was listened to and got really good advice. The outcome of the appointment was dictated by my wishes upon interpreting the medical advice I received, I didn't feel pressured or ignored like I have in the past. It was my first appointment with the doctor that I saw, and I'd definitely be more likely to book an appointment at the surgery now because of the positive experience I had in my appointment with her.

I had an appointment with the nurse for a blood test . I left work early to get to my appointment but unfortunately there had been an accident on the motorway meaning I was 5 minutes late for my appointment. My appointment was at 15:50 hrs and I arrived at the practice and booked in at 15:55 hrs. I was informed by reception that as I was late I could not have my bloods taken and the next appointment was in 3 weeks. I explained that there had been a crash on the motorway but the receptionist would not listen, he was not interested and was totally inflexible. I explained that I had lost wages coming for my appointment and that having another appointment would mean further losses but again he was not interested. I find the way I was treated to be totally unacceptable. I was 5 minutes late surely I could have been seen? I would appreciate a reply to the issue I have raised .

Very friendly reception staff on arrival. Doctor was nice and listened to what I had to say and got my baby sent to the hospital where he could be sorted properly.

Seen very quickly. The doctor was great and really patient with my daughter. He spoke to her in a calm and gentle manner and used words which she understood and didn't overcomplicate things when he explained them to her.

The receptionist seemed very efficient and pleasant, and the HCA I saw was also very pleasant and efficient and dealt with me on time and took my blood sample quickly and with no discomfort.

I needed an examination but was unable to get on the couch due to arthritis. The doctor did their best with me in a chair and made a follow up appointment in a room with a lower couch. This thankfully was subsequently not needed.

7. Review titledCould be more friendly

I was nervous about my first smear test and arrived 5 minutes late, which was my fault. However, the receptionist was quite rude and unwelcoming. They didn't acknowledge me when I arrived, and I had to ask for help with signing in. I understand customer service can be challenging, but a little friendliness goes a long way. I have notice this same pattern of behaviour multiple times when I have been to this GP.
